Introduction

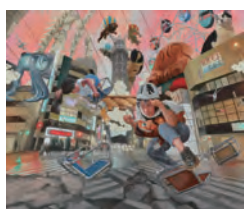

"Creating New Spaces and New Meanings"

This year marks the 88th Shinseisaku Exhibition. The Shinseisaku Art Society logo was created by founding members Genichiro Inokuma and Kazu Wakita, and the arrow in the logo represents improvement and progress. This spirit of improvement and progress has been firmly inherited by today's Shinseisaku Exhibition.

Today, there are many problems that are difficult to solve. And they are intricately intertwined. To solve them, it is necessary to tackle them from multiple directions with various ideas and methods. Thinking to derive a moderate answer independently while maintaining a relationship with other matters is also considered to be an effective method. Essentially, I believe that art is an entity in such a position. Art is not an activity that derives absolute answers, but an activity that pursues new meaning and creativity. It is an activity that offers healing and empathy to the viewer and values diversity. Art that pursues new possibilities has the power to enhance our humanity. Shinseisaku Art Society consists of three divisions: the Painting Division, the Sculpture Division, and the Space Design Division. Shinseisaku Exhibition features a diverse range of works, including challenging works that reflect the contemporary state of art and works that are an extension of everyday life activities. At the exhibition, new spaces and new meanings will be created between the viewers and the artworks. We look forward to the participation of many people.
